"It is with sincere regret that her hosts of friends in Denver see the bride depart. Her talents in a journalistic and dramatic direction are beyond the average, and she is no less a charming society girl, although she has always given thought to more serious things."

The largest and most elaborate event of the week was the dancing party given by Mrs. David Meriwether for Miss Pauline Alexander and Miss Lucie Meriwether. The handsome pariors and hall of the Meriwether residence in Hyde park, admirably arranged for entertaining, were thrown together, and the floors canvased for dancing. The deep window seats of all the rooms were filled with palms, and pink Laura Henderson, Miss Sara B. Gilbert. Miss Lenge bouquets of pink and white roses decorated the dining table and sideboard in the dining room. Punch was served in a pretty circular anteroom leading from the second parior to the lawn, and the punch table was daintily decked with forns. The pleasure of the evening was equally divided between dancing within doors and teteatetes and stroils on the spacious lawn.

A pretty incident of the evening was the arrival of a telegram from Miss Green and Miss Skilton, of Boston, greeting their inability to be present. The guests were linability to be prese

The Flower parade promises to be more notable and beautiful than any of its predecessors, partly because the commitpredecessors, partly because the commit-tee is bountifully supplied with funds, and also because the wealthy and prominent women of the city are evincing great in-terest and many entries of stylish turn-outs have already been made. The Flower parade is, in a manner, the most interest-ing event of the Festival week, as it cer-tainly is the most beautiful, and it be-hooves the women of the city, for whose pleasure, and that of their visiting friends, the event is intended, to enter their car-riages and traps at once, and do all in their power to make each vehicle more beautiful than the other. Kansas City's Flower parade may well rival in fame the Carnival at Nice and that at Pasadena, Cal.

The Way to Cut the Sash Ends. Chiefly grenadine and limonsine ribbon are worn now. A great deal of emphasis is laid on the manner in which you shape your ribbon ends. A wide crisp ribbon sash will have its ends cut in a series of five deep tooth-like indentations, while very many women cut their streamers in hatchet shape. A swallow fork or a bias shear, so long the only orthodox courses in ribodilpping, have been set aside, and a lightning edge is what many a sash end boasts. A lightning edge is just a series of irregular jags, like the course of those thunder boits the active American eagle grasps, and a good many sashes are snipped out to resemble a bellows point, or curved at their terminus to convey the idea of an Indian arrowhead. sash will have its ends cut in a series of

The Old Question of Secrets and the Opening of Each Other's Letters.

It all depends upon the way in which married life is commenced as to whether a couple have or have not any secrets between them. There are, no doubt, occasions on which it would be far better for the wife's happiness and peace of mind that she should be kept in the dark, for a time at least, during it would be far better for the wife's happiness and peace of mind that she should be kept in the dark, for a time at least, during her husband's season of anxiety.

It is easy to see that it is not wise to make a rule of always being quite open and communicative, for if silence is only fallen back upon in times of calamity or misfortune of some sort it will be tantamount to a confession that something very untoward has happened if ever the perusal of a letter or the answer to a question is denied the wife.

My own opinion—after a twelve years' experience of married life—is that it is far better to start from the commencement, not by being mysterious and secretive, but by being, in all save purely personal and family matters, cautious and not overcommunicative. The change from business and its anxieties to the peace of home life will be far more keenly appreciated if "shop" is not talked at home, and this may be the excuse any husband can offer should he wish to put his wife off an inconvenient tople.

And here, too, arises a much discussed question: Should married folk open each other's letters? There can, to my thinking be no two answers to this question, the only reasonable one being that they should not. There are hundreds and thousands of remarks which a near friend of husband or wife might make quite casually which might give offense and pain to one for whom the communication was not intended. There may be letters coming which, if read by both, would open up some old sore, or require a deal of explanation and a raking up of past history, which was long over and done with, and if ever a particular letter, which, if read by wife or husband when intended for the other, should be suppressed by the addressee, vague suspicion, if nothing worse, is awakened, and it takes a long time to allay it.

Let husband and wife trust each other thoroughly, and then they may keep their own—which probably may also be other people's—secrets from first to last with impunity.

A VALUABLE CAT THIS.

Curious Lawsuit Regarding Possession of a Feline Champion Worth One Hundred Pounds. From the New York Herald.

We have had a dog sold for more than £1,000, says the London Field; but it is something new to hear of a cat worth even a tenth of that sum. However, that a well cared for, handsome blue Persian pussy may be of the value of £100 was in evidence in the court of chancery recently, when Mr. Justice Stirling had before him a case in which Miss Harris and Miss Slater were concerned as plaintiff and defendant.

The trouble was connected with Roy, a Persia male cat, which had won several leading prizes at the chlef shows. In his kittenhood Roy had been bought for 30s (though now worth £100) by Miss Slater, who, knowing it to be a great bargain, and having no accommodation for keeping so valuable an animal, entered into negotiations with Miss Harris, who decided to keep Roy, look after him, feed and show him on condition that the prizes, etc., which he won, should be equally divided. As a fact, at the Crystal Palace show Roy had been exhibited in the joint names of the plaintiff and defendant.

Dissensions arose, and the matter was left to be decided by the National Cat Club, which ruled that the plaintiff had a half share in Roy. Then he was given up by Miss Harris to Miss Slater on the latter admitting that the former was entitled to half a share in the animal.

It was suggested by counsel that only when Roy furned out so well plaintiff wanted a share in him, but Mr. Justies Stirling said that a partnership existed between the parties, granted an injunction accordingly, and ordered that accounts of the partnership should be taken. a case in which Miss Harris and Miss Slater were concerned as plaintiff and de-

MR. BLAIR'S HEALTH RECIPES.

The Grand Old Man of Blairstown, N. J., Through His Doctor, Explains Longevity.

"Be temperate. "Don't worry."

Despite the fact that John I. Blair is worth many millions of dollars, he cele-brated his 96th birthday last Monday. Most multi-millionaires do not live long: the burden of their money is too heavy. That wealthy John I. Blair has almost arrived at the century mark in his life proves what a healthy old gentleman he is, well qualified to advise the compara-tively young how to reach a ripe old age. Mr. Blair has passed almost all his life at Blairstown, N. J. Dr. John C. Johnson, of Blairstown, has long been Mr. Blair's family physician, and intimately knows him.

of Blairstown, has long been Mr. Blair's family physician, and intimately knows him.

"I will be Mr. Blair's mouthplece," said Dr. Johnson. "I have carefully studied him. I give for him the advice you seek. It is summed up in few words:

"Be temperate.

"Don't worry.
"Let me add:

"If you inherit a sound constitution preserve and strengthen it by temperance in all things.

"Use neither stimulants nor tobacco.

"Work hard and you will sleep well.
"Let not your losses in business depress you, nor your gains exalt you."

John I. Blair, who lived by these rules, built a great part of the Lackawanna railroad. For the past three or four years he has been feeble, but his mind is as clear as when he made business dickers with old Commodore Vanderbilt, his hearing is almost perfect and his eyesight is remarkably good.

So be wise; profit by the sum of his wisdom. "Be temperate. Don't worry."

Beggars With Fortunes.

When Tori, a well known Italian professional beggar, died last year, there were found hidden away in his rooms bank books, securities, gold and sliver, amounting collectively to the value of upward of 200,000 francs, or 400,000. His heirs were two nephews, who for years had been existing in a state of pitiable poverty. In 1856 a beggar, who died in Auxerre, Frence, was found to have 1,000,000 francs in bonds in a trunk, and in his cellar 400 bottles of wine of the vintage of 1790. In the same year an old beggar woman, named Marie Dufour, who occupied a wretched garret at a house in the Rue de Sevres, Paris, was found dead in her bed. In a bundle belonging to her were found a deposit receipt for 20,000 francs in the name of the deceased, and government securities representing an annual income of 520 francs.

A man named Gustave Marcelin, a professional beggar, was found dead in his room in the Rue Puy Guillaume, Avignon, in November, 1892. A search led to the discovery of French government bonds and various securities to the value of $100,000. He left a paper requesting that his savings might be divided equally between the city and the Bureau de Blenfatsance.

The wealthiest living professional beggar, Simon Oppasich, was in 1893 sentenced to seven years hard labor for perjury. He was born without feet or arms, and his physical defects brought him exceptional sympathy and cash. In 1880, at the age of 47, he had saved $50,000; and in 1888 he had by speculation increased his fortune to $125,000 in cash and some $200,000 in Trieste and Parenzo real estate. Since then he has quadrupled his wealth by trading on the Bourse.
